vulgarity) The Magic 8 Ball may look easy, and it is too - easiest fortune-telling device available. All you do is ask a question, shake it slightly (although most sources suggest refraining from doing so), and then you turn it over and read its response through that little window at its base. Right? But what are all the answers and what do they all mean? A standard Magic 8 Ball has a total of 20 answers - 10 affirmative, 5 non-committal and 5 negatives. The Magic 8 Balls responses (explained in detail below) are very carefully and statistically designed to be accurate and each of them mean something much more than they seem to say. You can trust its answers too, just as much as your intuitive voice tells you to. A standard Magic 8 Ball has 20 possible answers, such as Concentrate and ask again and Reply hazy, try again. The answers, and 5 negative answers, such as Concentrate and ask again and Reply hazy, try again. The answers, and 5 negative answers, such as Concentrate and ask again and Reply hazy, try again. The answers are actually on a white die, floating at the centre of the Magic 8 Ball - the words are raised so that they can be visible when the die is pressed against the little glass window. Affirmative AnswersNon - Committal AnswersNot a doubtBetter not tell you nowMy sources say noYes definitelyCannot predict nowOutlook not so goodYou may wonderful - the number of options you have with the Magic 8 Ball. Like your own secret Santa. Lets dive in a bit deeper, with detailed explanations of all the possible answers for a question. Its important to understand that the Magic 8 Ball cannot change the physical reality, the past, present or the future. It will only tell you the truth you want to or need to hear. You will also not always get the right answer - which makes it trustworthy. Just like real life, most of the times it is also a non-committal responses of the Magic 8 Ball. We're borrowing a question from the suggested ones on the original packaging of the first Magic 8 Ball, and doing a detailed analysis of a few of the possible answers. Magic 8 Ball, inquiring minds want to know: O: Can our team win? A1: You may rely on it. Obviously means a Yes, the team can definitely win. However, if you read between the lines, it means that the win can possibly be relied upon, but is not a sure shot Yes. A2: Signs point to yes. This response is a surer shot Yes. A3: Most likely. An answer more tilted towards a Yes than a No. A4: Very doubtful. A less sure shot Yes. A3: Most likely. An answer more tilted towards a Yes than a No. A4: Very doubtful. A less sure shot Yes. A3: Most likely. An answer! A6: Don't count on it. A heart-sinking Negative response. A7: Cannot predict now. Definitely one of its more non-committal answers. More like the Ball saying try again if you still want an answer, or accept this as one. A8: Concentrate and ask again. In our opinion, this response is Magic 8 Balls absolute best. More like the Ball telling you that you aren't concentrating on your question and on what you really want enough - Consciously concentrate on what you want, ask again and the Ball (the universe?) will give it to you. In other words, find the thing that opens your wonderful, adventurous, compassionate, intelligent heart. Bonus tip: Now, we suggest, you frame the guestion more directly to make more sense of the answer you receive. For example, Can our team win this season? OR Can our team win the match today? OR Can our team win the final tournament this year? Can our team win the match today? OR Can our team win the match today? OR Can our team win the final tournament this year?

reframes question and ALL the answers explained this time. Compare with the same responses above to get a better idea of the difference that reframing the question has made on the meaning of your now new responses. Q: Can our team win the match today? A1: It is certain. Obviously means a Yes, the team can definitely win the match today.
However, if you read between the lines, it means that the win can possibly be relied upon, but is not a sure shot Yes. Meaning what exactly? If your team works hard and is motivated enough, the match today is yours! A2: It is decidedly so. The word decided so. The word decided so. The word decided so. decidedly a certain way is absolutely that way, with no hint of doubt. So the win for the teams match today is a win-win and the players should confidently play without a doubt, you are emphasizing that it is definitely true. Absolutely or with absolute certainty; with no doubt whatsoever. Hence, the team is definitely winning today, and that it could not is not even a topic of discussion. A4: Yes definite sure shot. Again, something that we don't have any doubts about.
A5: You may rely on it. Means to trust or believe - someone or something, in this case the Magic 8 Ball. Obviously means a Yes, the team can definitely win. However, if you read between the lines, it means that the win can possibly be relied upon, but is not a sure shot Yes. A6: As I see it, yes. The meaning of YES is —used as a word to express agreement or affirmation to emphasize and amplify the affirmative answer. Do you want that? Yes, I do. Will the team win? Yes, it will most likely than not: like a probably. For example, It will most likely rain tomorrow. It will most likely be sunny tomorrow. An answer more tilted towards a Yes than a No. The team will most likely win the match today than not. A8: Outlook good! The predictions are good! The prediction are good! The prediction are good! The pr Almost like expressing great pleasure, excitement, or even encouragement at the victory ahead. A10: Signs point to the mayor winning the election, means the mayor will probably win the election but it is not 100% guaranteed. Hence, all the signs point to, yes, the victory of the team in todays game, meaning the team might scoot very closely past the victory. So be careful! A1: Reply hazy, try again. Try again simply means to try something twice or many more times. So, maybe it just means to try asking the Ball again - now or later. It doesn't know whether or not your team can win today, yet. A2: Ask again later usually means exactly what it seems to mean - ask later. This is usually a tactic to delay an unpleasant response or one for the Ball to buy time to ponder the answer further. But look at it like this - Its an option for you to try your luck with the Ball again in a while, and it might just give you the answer that you are looking for. A3: Better not tell you now. Again, this could be the Ball saying - I know your future but the time isn't right for you to know yet. Try again for an answer that is more right for you. Trust the Ball when you get this response, and either let go for the day or try again, in a while. A4: Cannot predict now. Definitely one of its more non-committal answers. More like the Magic 8 Ball saying try again if you still want an answer, or accept this as one. Will the team win the match today? Ah, hard to predict that right now. A5: Concentrate and ask again. In our opinion, this response is Magic 8 Balls absolute best. More like the Ball telling you that you aren't concentrate on what you want, ask again and the Ball (the universe?) will give it to you. In other words, find the thing that opens your wonderful, adventurous, compassionate, intelligent heart.
Visualise the teams indefinite victory today and then ask it again for a more positive answer. Like we always say - its all about your intention. A1: Don't count on it. A heart-sinking Negative response. This is the Magic 8 Ball cautioning you against expecting something. For example, yes, you might have overheard the bosses talking at the Christmas party, but don't count on the bonus this holiday season. If you think your team is going to win the match today, don't count on it. There are factors that may be hindering the win. eLets do this again. A2: My reply is no. If there is one answer that you do not want to see on the Magic 8 Ball, it is this one. Heart-sinking of them all. No percentage or chances. The response is a flat no. Is the team going to win the match today? No, it is not. But the trick here is to not loose hope. It may be no for a reason. It is a chance for you to step back, re-evaluate and then give the victory of the team a re-attempt. A3: My sources say no. A definite No for an answer! But like we said before, do not loose hope. It may be no for a reason. It is a chance for you to step back, re-evaluate and then give it a re-attempt. A4: Outlook not so good. This response is more of a point of view or prospect. So the teams victory definitely doesn't look a probably possibility. Oops.
A5: Very doubtful. A less sure shot No, but somewhere in the middle. So the team might win, higher chances are that it might not. You know now that the standard Magic 8 Ball available in the markets today have a 20 sided white plastic die inside it with the answers you see as the die itself floats in the blue liquid which gives the effect of the answer slowly appearing as you look through the window - 20 possible answers. But do you know how many answers the very original first major revision saw this being reduced to a single die, giving the possibility of just six answers. Then came the final Magic 8 Ball version that we find in the markets today, with 20 possible answers. A bit of a background on how this came about. In the 1940s, a clairvoyant by the name of Mary Carter, in Cincinnati, inspired her son with an object she used with her clients - a container with a small chalk slate inside it. She would shake the container and open it to reveal the clients answer to the question, written on the slate. Her son, Albert Carter, advanced the design into an easier to operate device - the Syco Seer. A simple cylinder with both transparent ends, filled with molasses, and two dice with answers written on each face - a TOTAL of 12 answers. When it was shaken and up-ended, one of the dice would drift to the top, revealing a random face/answer. Figure 4 - The FIRST version - The Syco Seer - with 12 answers. Albert Carter took his idea to a local merchant, with the intention of getting it mass-produced. The merchant, Max Levinson, with his brother-in-law, Abe Bookman, altered the design by reducing the number of windows to one, changing the molasses to inky water and naming in Syco Slate - with 6 answers. It was Bookman who then decided to change the overall shape to that of a crystal ball, in collaboration a Chicago-based company called Brunswick Billiards, in 1950. An 8-Ball variant was made, which was so successful that it eventually became the Magic 8 Ball that we see today, with a 20 sided die inside it - a TOTAL of 20 answers, manufactured and patented by the toy store, Mattel. The Magic 8 Ball has endured for more than a half-century. It was a brilliant idea of the son of a clairvoyant, brainchild of a merchant and finally the patented mass-produced toy of a toy company. But it is more than just a toy. It has become an icon of popular culture, with appearances in shows such as The Dick Van Dyke Show in the 1960s, Friends, Seinfeld, Murphy Brown, and The Daily Show. Variations of the original seem almost as popular as the real thing. Individuals can now commission a customized version, and online editions respond to typed questions. The original that started with just 12 simple answers is now a world favourite with over 20 possible answers to different scenarios! Each answer is unique, and means more than just what it appears to be. Keep your options open, intentions clear and ask the ball What you want. The answer can mean anything at all! Reference 2: LinkedIn - Chance vs. Choice: Life
