Continue

```
Share — copy and redistribute the material in any medium or format for any purpose, even commercially. Adapt — remix, transform, and build upon the material for any purpose, even commercially. The licensor cannot revoke these freedoms as long as you follow the license terms. Attribution — You must give appropriate credit, provide a link to the license, and indicate if changes were made . You may do so in any reasonable manner, but not in any way that suggests the licensor endorses you or your use. ShareAlike — If you remix, transform, or build upon the material, you must distribute your contributions under the same license as the original. No additional restrictions — You may not apply legal terms or technological measures that legally restrict others from doing anything the license permits. You do not have to comply with the license for elements of the material in the public domain or where your use is permitted by an applicable exception or limitation. No warranties are given. The license may not give you all of the permissions necessary for your intended use. For example, other rights such as publicity, privacy, or moral rights may limit how you use the material. 1 Start with the author's name, if known. Some encyclopedia entries include the name of the person who wrote or edited the entry. If a name is included, it will be the first part of your citation entry on your "Works Cited" page. Put the author's last name first, followed by their first name and middle initial, place a period at the entry in quotation marks. Many encyclopedia entries do not list an author for specific entries. In that case, skip over the author and use the full title of the entry as the first part of your citation entry on your "Works Cited" page. Enclose the title in quotation marks and place a period at the entry as the first part of your citation entry on your "Racism." Example with no author: "Racism." Example with author: "Racism." Example with no author: "Racism." Example with author: "Racism." Ex citation provides the name of the encyclopedia in italics, followed by the editor's name, edition, volume number, publisher name, and date of publication. Depending on the encyclopedia and how you accessed it, some of this information may not be available. Include as much as possible, with a comma between each piece of information. Place a comma after the date of publication. Example with no author: "Asteroids." The Illustrated Encyclopedia of the Universe, edited by James W. Guthrie, 2nd ed., vol. 1, Watson-Guptill, 2001, Example with author: Juturu, Vijaya. "Type 2 Diabetes." Encyclopedia of Obesity, edited Kathleen Keller, vol. 2, Sage Publications, 2008, For an online encyclopedia, there likely won't be edition or volume numbers. To find any editor's name, and date of publication, look on the home page of the encyclopedia or on an "About" page. Ask a reference librarian if you're not sure. 4 List the page numbers for print encyclopedia. After the encyclopedia's publication information, type a space and then "p."
(for a single page) or "pp." (for a page range). Type the page where the entry starts, a hyphen, then the page where the entry ends. Example with no author: "Guyana" Oxford Encyclopedia of World History, compiled by Market House Books, Oxford UP, 1998, p. 283. 5Give the URL and date of access for online encyclopedias. If you accessed the encyclopedia online, follow the publication information with the specific URL for the entry, rather than a page number. Don't include "http://" at the beginning of the URL. Example: McLean, Steve. "The Tragically Hip." The Canadian Encyclopedia, 26 Mar. 2015, Historica Canada. www.thecanadianencyclopedia in a library or other online database, put the name of the database in italics at the end of your citation, rather than a URL. Example:
"Racism." Britannica Academic, 2013. Encyclopædia Britannica. 6 Use a specific format for Wikipedia entries. Because Wikipedia is constantly updated, MLA requires you to include the date and time the entry you used was last modified, as well as the date you last viewed it. This allows your readers to go back into the page's history and review the same page you did. Basic format for Wikipedia: The Free Encyclopedia, Wikimedia Foundation, Day Month Year entry last modified, URL of entry. Wikipedia: The Free Encyclopedia, Wikimedia Foundation, 16 June 2016, 7:41 pm, en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Body_image. Accessed 28 June 2016. Wikipedia may not be an acceptable source. If you're writing a research paper for a school assignment, clear the source with your paper. If you refer to the encyclopedia entry in the text of your paper or report, include a parenthetical citation at the end of the sentence. This enables your readers to find the full citation on your "Works Cited" page. If the entry began with the author's name, provide t quotation marks. Example: ("Racism") The manual way to reference a Wikipedia article in Harvard style for the Wikipedia article in Harvard style in to use our reference a Wikipedia article in Harvard style. The easiest way is to use our reference a Wikipedia article in Harvard style.
box and press search. We'll find the details automatically and format them in the style you selected. The manually. A Wikipedia article is essentially just a webpage, so you should reference it in the same way you would usually reference a webpage. For Harvard style this is as follows: First, locate these details for the article: article title, published date, access date, article URL (web address). The article title can be found at the top of the article article title, published date, access date article urt. (web address). The article title can be found at the top of the article title, published date, access date article urt. (web address). the date you took information from the article (usually today). Then use this template, replacing the coloured placeholders with the information you found on the page: Wikipedia Contributors (Published date year). Article title. [online] Wikipedia Contributors (Published date year). look like this: Wikipedia Contributors (2018). Thanos. [online] Wikipedia. Available at: [Accessed 16 Jul. 2018]. There are many different ways to cite a website in any citation style Use our citation generator below to automatically cite a website in any style, including APA, MLA 7 and 8, and Harvard-this is as follows: In APA style You need, copy the URL into the search box, and press search. We'll do the rest. The manual way to cite a website To cite a website by hand just follow the instructions below. For the 3 most popular styles-APA, MLA 8, and Harvard-this is as follows: In APA style You need to locate these details for the website: page or article author, page mouse over the browser tab. The website name can usually be found in the web address or by looking for a logo or similar at the very top of the page. There often isn't a publish date, but if there is it'll be very close to the page URL can be copied straight from the address bar of your browser and will start with either http:// or https://. Then use this template, replacing the colored placeholders with the information you found on the page: Author last name, author first name initial. (published month and day). Page title. Retrieved accessed month and day, accessed year, from article URL
The final formatted citation should look like this: Ingle, S. (2018, February 11). Winter Olympics was hit by cyber-attack, officials confirm. Retrieved July 24, 2018, from . Example of a website citation in APA style For a more comprehensive guide, including what to do when you can't find certain details, have a look at our more in-depth guide to citing a website in APA format. In MLA 8 style Here are the specific details you need to find on the page or article author, page or article author, page or article author, page or article title, website name, published date, access date, page URL (web address). The author can typically be found on the page, but if there isn't one listed you can use the website name in its place. The page title can be found near the top of the page, and you can also find it by hovering your mouse over the browser tab. The website name can usually be found in the web address or by looking for a logo or similar at the very top of the page. There often isn't a publish date, but if there is it'll be very close to the page title. The access date is the date you took information from the article (usually today). The page URL can be copied straight from the address bar of your browser and will start with either http:// or https://. Then use this template: Author first name, author first formatted citation should look like this: Ingle, Sean. "Winter Olympics Was Hit by Cyber-Attack, Officials Confirm." The Guardian, 11 Feb. 2018. Example of a website citation in MLA 8 style For a more comprehensive guide, including what to do when you can't find certain details, have a look at our more in-depth guide to citing a website in MLA 8 format. In Harvard style First, find these details for the website: page or article author, page or article author, page or article title, website name, published date, access date, page URL (web address). The author can typically be found on the page, but if there isn't one listed you can use the website name in its place. The page title can be found near the top of the page, and you can also find it by hovering your mouse over the browser tab. The website name can usually be found in the web address or by looking for a logo or similar at the very top of the page. There often isn't a publish date, but if there is it'll be very close to the page title. The access date is the date you took information from the article (usually today). The page URL can be copied straight from the address bar of your browser and will start with either http:// or https://. Then use this template: Author last name, author firstname initial (published date year). Page title. [online] website name. Available at: page URL [Accessed accessed date day, month, year]. The final formatted citation should look like this: Ingle, S. (2018). Winter Olympics was hit by cyber-attack, officials confirm. [online] The Guardian. Available at: [Accessed 13 Jul. 2018]. Example of a website reference in Harvard style Wikipedia has always had a reputation for being unreliable as a source because anyone can edit it, but it's actually more credible than you think. This is because every statement on Wikipedia has to be backed up with a source. Whether you are allowed to use it then you need to cite it correctly. There are many different ways to cite a Wikipedia article, all depending on the citation style you need to format it in. The easy way to cite a Wikipedia article The easiest way is to use our citation generator below. Simply select the style you need to format your citation in, then paste the URL for the Wikipedia article into the search box and press search. We'll find the details automatically and format them in the style you selected. Then you can copy the generated citation into your paper. The manual way to cite a Wikipedia article by hand. A Wikipedia article by hand. A Wikipedia article by hand. A Wikipedia article is essentially just a webpage, so you would cite a Wikipedia article by hand. A Wikipedia article is essentially just a webpage, so you would cite a Wikipedia article by hand. A Wikiped need to locate these details for the article: article title, published date, access date, article URL (web address). The article title can be found at the bottom looking something like This page was last edited on 13 July 2018, at 00:02 (UTC). The access date is the date you took information from the article (usually today's date). Then use this template, replacing the colored placeholders with the information you found on the page: Wikipedia Contributors, (Published month and day). Article title. Retrieved Accessed month and day, Accessed wear, from Article URL. The final formatted citation should look like this:
Wikipedia Contributors. (2018, July 13). The Infinity Gauntlet. Retrieved July 14, 2018, from Example Wikipedia citation in APA style In MLA 8 style You need to locate these details for the article article article article title, published date, accessed date, article title, published date, accessed date, article title can be found at the top of the article article, and the publish date can be found right at the bottom looking something like This page was last edited on 13 July 2018, at 00:02 (UTC).. The accessed date is the date you took information from the article (usually today). Then use this template: Wikipedia, Wikimedia Foundation, Published date day, month, year, Article URL. Accessed Accessed date day, month, year. The final formatted citation should look like this: Wikipedia Contributors. "The Infinity Gauntlet." Wikipedia citation in MLA 8 style In Harvard style You need to locate these details for the article: article title, published date, accessed date, article URL (web address). The article title can be found at the top of the article, and the publish date can be found right at the bottom looking something like This page was last edited on 13 July 2018, at 00:02 (UTC).. The accessed date is the date you took information from the article (usually today). Then use this template: Wikipedia Contributors (Published date year). Article title. [online] Wikipedia. Available at: Article URL [Accessed Accessed date day, month, year]. The final formatted reference should look like this: Wikipedia Contributors (2018). The Infinity Gauntlet. [online] Wikipedia. Available at: [Accessed 14 Jul. 2018]. Example Wikipedia reference in MLA 8 style Academic style and writing format Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association, Seventh Edition Style AGA style AUS atyle AUS atyl Chicago Manual of Style Citing Medicine The Elements of Typographic Style Guide Microsoft Manual of Style Guide Microsoft Manual IEEE style ISO 690 MHRA Style Guide The Oxford Style Guide The New York Times Manual of Style Guide The Oxford Style Guide Oxford Standard for Citation of Legal Authorities Scientific Style and Format Turabian: A Manual for Writers List of style guides List field of behavioral and social sciences, including sociology, education, nursing, criminal justice, anthropology, and psychological Association (APA), titled the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association. The guidelines were developed to aid reading comprehension in the became involved in journal publishing in 1923.[3] In 1929, an APA committee had a seven-page writer's guide published in the Psychological Bulletin.[4][5] In 1944, a 32-page guide appeared as an article in the same journal.[3][6] The first edition of the APA Publication Manual was published in 1952 as a 61-page supplement to the Psychological Bulletin,[7][8] marking the beginning of a recognized "APA style".[3] The initial edition went through two revisions: one in 1957, and one in 1967.[3] Subsequent editions were released in 1974, 1983, 1994, 2001, 2009, and 2019. The increasing length of the guidelines and its transformation into a manual have been accompanied by increasingly point of an argument clear and simple to the reader.[11] Particularly influential were the "Guidelines for Nonsexist Language in APA Journals", first published as a modification to the 1974 edition, which provided practical alternatives to sexist language then in common usage.[12][13] The guidelines for reducing bias in language have been updated over the years and presently provide practical guidance for writing about age, disability, gender, participation in research, race and ethnicity, sexual orientation, socioeconomic status, and intersectionality (APA, 2020, Chapter 5).[1] The seventh edition of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association is the current one, published in October 2019. The goal of the book is to help people become better writers and communicators by promoting clarity, precision, and inclusivity.[14] The manual has new resources for students, including a student title page, student paper formats, and student reference formats such as classroom course pack material and classroom website sources. The book also includes new journal article reporting standards for qualitative and mixed methods research in addition to updated to reflect current best practices for talking about people's personal characteristics.[15] The manual addresses accessibility for people with disabilities for the first time. [16] APA worked with accessibile. For example, the in-text citation format is shortened so that the citations are easier to read for people who, for example, the in-text citation format is shortened so that the citations are easier to read for people who, for example, the in-text citation format is shortened so that the citations are easier to read for people who, for example, the in-text citation format is shortened so that the citations are easier to read for people who, for example, the in-text citation format is shortened so that the citations are easier to read for people who, for example, the in-text citation format is shortened so that the citation format is shortened as the citation format is short APA Style. The running head is an abbreviated version of the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers along with the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers along with the page number. In student papers, the page number is placed in the header but the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers along with the page number. In student papers, the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers, the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers along with the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers along with the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers along with the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers along with the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers along with the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers along with the page number is placed in the header but the page number. In student papers along with the page number is placed in the header but the page number.
reference examples, including formats for audiovisual media, social medi blog[19] to help people with APA style and answer common questions. The Publication Manual Revision Task Force of the American Psychological Association was in effect from 2009 to 2019, after four years of development. The Publication Manual Revision Task Force of the American Psychological Association was in effect from 2009 to 2019, after four years of development. based on published critique; user comments; commissioned reviews; and input from psychologists, nurses, librarians, business leaders, publishing professionals, and APA governance groups. [20][21] To accomplish these revisions, the Task Force appointed working groups of four to nine members in seven areas: bias-free language, ethics, graphics, Journal Article Reporting Standards, [22] references, statistics, and writing style (APA, 2009, pp. xvii-xviii). The APA explained the issuing of a new edition only eight years after the fifth edition by pointing to the increased use of online source or online access to academic journals (6th edition, p. XV). The sixth edition is accompanied by a style website as well as the APA Style Blog which answers many common questions from users. [citation needed] Sample papers in the first printing of the sixth edition contained errors. APA staff posted all of the corrections online for free in a single document on October 1, 2009, and shortly thereafter alerted users to the existence of the corrections in an APA blog entry.[23] These errors attracted significant attention from the scholarly community and nearly two weeks later, on October 13, 2009, the article "Correcting a Style Guide" was published in the online newspaper Inside Higher Ed that included interviews with several individuals, one of whom described the errors as "egregious".[24] All copies of the printing with errors were soon after recalled in 2009 (including those from major retailers such as Amazon.com) and a new printing correcting all the errors, with a copyright date of 2010,[25] was issued. Citation Comparison of reference management software MLA style Chicago style ^ a b The Publication Manual of the American Psychological Sexton, Virginia; Cadwallader, Thomas C. (eds.). The American Psychological Association: A Historical Perspective. Washington, DC: American Psychological Association. pp. 347-390. ISBN 978-1-55798-136-3. Bentley, M.; Peerenboom, C. A.; Hodge, F. W.; Passano, Edward B.; Warren, H. C.; Washburn, M. F. (February 1929). "Instructions in regard to preparation of manuscript". Psychological Bulletin. 26 (2): 57-63. doi:10.1037/h0071487. ISSN 0033-2909. ^ "APA Style Blog: The Origins of APA Style". blog.apastyle.org. Retrieved December 14, 2016. ^ Anderson, J. E.; Valentine, W. L. (June 1944). "The preparation of articles for publication in the journals of the American Psychological Association". Psychological Bulletin. 41 (6): 345-376. doi:10.1037/h0063335. ISSN 0033-2909. ^ "Publication Manual of the American Psychological Bulletin. 49 (4): 388-448. 1952. ^ APA Publications and Communications Board Working Group on Journal Article Reporting Standards (December 2008). "Reporting Standards (December 2008)."
Standards for Research in Psychology: Why Do We Need Them? What Might They Be?" (PDF). American Psychologist. 63 (9): 839-851. doi:10.1037/0003-066x.63.9.839. PMC 2957094. PMID 19086746. ^ Bazerman, C. (1987). Codifying the social scientific style: The APA Publication Manual as a behaviorist rhetoric. In J. Nelson, A. Megill, & D.
McCloskey (Eds.). The rhetoric of the human sciences (pp. 125-144). Madison: University of Wisconsin Press. ^ Madigan, R., Johnson, S., Linton, P., Fowler, R. (1995). The Language of Psychology: APA Style as Epistemology. The American Psychological Association. September 2019. Archived from the original on September 18, 2023. Retrieved October 3, 2023. APA Task Force on Issues of Sexual Bias in Graduate Education (June 1975). "Guidelines for nonsexist use of language". American Psychologist. 32 (6). Washington, DC: American Psychological Association: 487-494. doi:10.1037/h0076869 ISSN 0003-066X. OCLC 696450842. ^ APA Publication Manual Task Force (June 1977). "Guidelines for nonsexist language in APA journals [Change Sheet 2]". American Psychological Association: 682-684. doi:10.1037/0003-066X.32.6.487. ISSN 0003-066X. OCLC 696450842. ^ "About APA Style".
APAStyle.org. American Psychological Association. Retrieved February 27, 2020. a b "Product page for Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association. Retrieved February 27, 2020. a b "Product page for Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association. Retrieved February 27, 2020.
American Psychological Association. April 13-14, 2007. APA Publications and Communications Board (Agenda book). Washington, DC: American Psychological Association. April 13-14, 2007. APA Publications and Communications Board (Agenda book).
Psychology: Why Do We Need Them? What Might They Be" (PDF). American Psychologist. 63 (9): 839-851. doi:10.1037/0003-066x.63.9.839. PMC 2957094. PMID 19086746. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 8, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections". APA blog. Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections. APA blog. PMC 2957094. PMID 19086746. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 8, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 8, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community: Sixth Edition Corrections." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community." APA blog. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community." APA Style Community. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community." APA Style Community. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community." APA Style Community. Skutley, Mary Lynn (October 13, 2009). "Note to APA Style Community." APA Style Community. Skutley APA Style Doug (eds.). "Correcting a Style Guide". Inside Higher Ed. Washington, DC. Retrieved October 27, 2011. ^ "Publication manual of the American Psychological Association". LC Catalog. American Psychological Association (7th ed.).
Washington, DC: American Psychological Association. 2020. ISBN 978-1-4338-3217-8. (spiral bound) Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association. 2010. ISBN 978-1-4338-0562-2. (spiral bound) Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association.
Washington, DC: American Psychological Association. 2001. ISBN 978-1-55798-791-4. Wikiversity has learning resources about APA style Official website APA resources about APA style Official website APA resources about APA style Official website APA resources at Purdue University's Online Writing Lab Retrieved from "Some academics don't consider Wikipedia a credible source for research papers. As Wikipedia articles are authored and revised by public users, the content might include incorrect or biased information, or important information might be missing. Additionally, since the material is updated by various users, it could include typos or grammatical errors that alter its meaning of the material. Even though Wikipedia articles are community-vetted for bias and accuracy academia still considers them unreliable. However, Wikipedia can serve as a practical way to introduce yourself to an unknown topic when writing a research paper. When used as a preliminary reference, it can help direct you toward credible primary and secondary sources that bolster your ideas. If you need to cite Wikipedia in APA format, be aware that it'll look slightly different from a conventional APA website citation. A Wikipedia citation in APA format write the entry version you're referencing. Grammarly helps you avoid plagiarism How to cite Wikipedia in APA format Write the entry version you're referencing.
sentence case. Since Wikipedia pages can be updated frequently, use the date of the entry version you're referencing as well as the URL unique to that version. The website will always be formatted as "In Wikipedia citation in APA format should look like: Wikipedia entry title. (Year, Month Day). In Wikipedia. Version URL Example: Dual process theory (moral psychology). (2022, April 22). In Wikipedia. moral psychology) To find the URL for the exact version of the entry that you want to cite. The URL in the search bar is now the entry version's specific URL to include in your Wikipedia citation. In-text citation When citing the Wikipedia source within your narrative, place it within your sentence by shortening the entry's title. Example: The concept of "Dual process" (2022) . . . Parenthetical citation To cite Wikipedia parenthetically in APA format within your research paper, keep the shortened title of the Wikipedia article in APA format. Automatically cite a Wikipedia article in APA format The easiest way is to use our citation generator below. Simply select the style you need to format your citation in, then paste the URL for the Wikipedia article in APA format Alternatively you can cite a Wikipedia article in the style you selected. Manually cite a Wikipedia article in APA format Alternatively you can cite a Wikipedia article in the style you selected. Manually cite a Wikipedia article in APA format Alternatively you can cite a Wikipedia article in the style you selected. manually. A Wikipedia article is essentially just a webpage, so you should cite it in the same way you would usually cite a webpage. For APA format this is as follows: First, locate these details for the article article it in the same way you would usually cite a webpage. For APA format this is as follows: First, locate these details for the article it in the same way you would usually cite a webpage. For APA format this is as follows: First, locate these details for the article it in the same way you would usually cite a webpage. can be found right at the bottom and looks something like This page was last edited on 12 July 2018, at 13:50 (UTC). The access date is the date you took information you found on the page: Wikipedia Contributors. (Published year Published month and day). Article title. Retrieved Accessed month and day, Accessed year, from Article URL. The final formatted citation should look like this: Wikipedia article in APA format. Automatically cite a Wikipedia article in APA format.
format The easiest way is to use our citation generator below. Simply select the style you need to format your citation in, then paste the URL for the Wikipedia article into the search box and press search. We'll find the details automatically and format them in the style you selected. Manually cite a Wikipedia article in APA format Alternatively you can cite a Wikipedia article manually. A Wikipedia article is essentially just a webpage, so you should cite it in the same way you would usually cite a webpage. For APA format this is as follows: First, locate these details for the article: article title, published date, access date, article URL (web address). The article title can be found at the top of the article, and the publish date can be found right at the bottom and looks something like This page was last edited on 12 July 2018, at 13:50 (UTC). The access date is the date you took information from the article (usually today). Then use this template, replacing the colored placeholders with the information you found on the page: Wikipedia Contributors.
(Published year, Published month and day). Article title. Retrieved Accessed month and day, Accessed year, from Article URL. The final formatted citation should look like this: Wikipedia Contributors. (2018, July 12). Marvel Comics. Retrieved July 15, 2018, from Whether writing an essay or completing or scientific lab report, you should cite all primary and secondary sources. Many students include Wikipedia in their digital research. Known as the free encyclopedia, Wikipedia provides information on topics from many categories, including those used in academics. Although many colleges and universities do not recognize Wikipedia as a reliable source because its pages can be edited by anyone, the site still offers a jumping-off point in several categories of education and literature. You can use Wikipedia as a source if other more reliable references are consulted in addition. As more students become aware of and rely on the information from Wikipedia article properly. Although Wikipedia article properly. Although Wikipedia article properly. Although Wikipedia article properly. to cite a Wikipedia page, how to cite the page, and how to use citation generators to make the job easier. Do You Need to Cite Wikipedia Articles? The answer here is absolutely yes. Any information or ideas that you do not create yourself (unless common knowledge) must be cited in your referenced materials. That includes citing Wikipedia articles you use for research or which get quoted as part of the writing process. If you forget to cite your Wikipedia sources, you leave yourself open to accusations of plagiarism, which is a serious offense especially among academics. This is because you are not giving credit to the original author of the information you use Plagiarism is the act of copying written work, which even includes copying your own work from another time or paper. Citing all the work you use a Wikipedia article or a wiki page, you read information written by others or that subject. Wikipedia pages provide an original source for any facts cited on the website. If that cited source appears more original than your Wikipedia page. The problem with Wikipedia is that the website is an open-source encyclopedia meaning anybody can add to any Wikipedia page or change the article. Unlike published journals, Wikipedia content never gets peer-reviewed by professionals in the field of study the topics fall within. Still, to avoid plagiarism, it's best to always reference any information you get from a Wikipedia article—even if it's from Wikipedia. How to Cite a Wikipedia Article The type of document you are writing, combined with the personal preference of your professor, dictate the citation style from a Chicago Style paper or an APA style paper. Some professors may request you use the source listed on Wikipedia rather than a Wikipedia link. Others may not allow you to use Wikipedia as a resource at all. While book and journal article citations require a wide range of information, like authors' names, edition numbers, publisher name, and DOI, citing a Wikipedia article requires you only the following: Wikipedia as a resource at all. While book and journal article citations require a wide range of information, like authors' names, edition numbers, publisher name, and DOI, citing a Wikipedia article requires you only the following: Wikipedia as a resource at all.
date the page was last updated A link to the page The order of this information and the additional content required for a citation differs from style to style. Check the preference of your field of study, or professor, before writing your sources. It is important to note that Wikipedia won't list an author for any of the information they provide. That is because so many different writers contribute to the same articles, and they get changed frequently over the years. When choosing the citation format to use, remember to add them to your citation. Citing Wikipedia might seem daunting because there are so many styles to consider. Here are the best ways to cite any Wikipedia link for your reference list by style and format. Whether you write an English essay in MLA, a psychology paper in APA, or a journalism piece in Chicago Style, you can cite Wikipedia with the following templates and tips. MLA Style MLA format, or Modern Language Association format, is used on papers relating to language arts, English, and the humanities. MLA format began in the 1950s as a style sheet and has flourished to include nine editions of a writing guide as of 2021. Use the most up-to-date version of the MLA style guide when possible to avoid inconsistencies or outdated formatting. The most recent MLA style guide requires italics on the source of the work cited (in this case, Wikipedia, Wiki modified, URL. A more specific example of an MLA citation would appear as: "MLA Handbook." Wikipedia, Wikimedia Foundation, 2022, . Write the title as a parenthetical citation with quotation marks in the text next to your quote as, ("Des Moines, Iowa"). This tells your reader which Wikipedia link in your works cited section is referenced in your sentence or paragraph. Place the in-text citation at the end of the sentence you are citing, but before the period. If you use this reference more than once, you must cite the page after each mention. APA Style APA stands for American Psychological Association. APA format citations are used for several academic papers but are common in the social sciences, including Psychology and Sociology. APA style citations are used for several academic papers but are common in the social sciences, including Psychology and Sociology. APA style citations are used for several academic papers but are common in the social sciences, including Psychology and Sociology. other style guide, using the most recent version offers the best chance at correct citations and formatting. Unless your professor specifies the version they wish you to use, assume the newest version is the correct to consult. APA style often includes a DOI (Digital Object Identifier) for journal publications and only capitalizes the first word of the title That isn't necessary in the case of Wikipedia citations but is a great tip when citing other APA-style resources. An APA style works cited usually requires you to use a specific reference entry of the webpage. On Wikipedia, you can determine which version of Wikipedia, but if you need an old version to prove a point be sure to cite that modification date and URL. On a works cited page, an APA style citation looks like this: Title of the article. (Year, Month Day). In Wikipedia. URL A more specific version of an APA style citation would appear as: APA Style. (2021, November 1). In Wikipedia.
APA uses parenthesis in the in-text citation. It also includes a comma and the date of publication or retrieval date. For example, if you reference the Wikipedia page American Psychological Association, it should appear, ("American Psychological Association," 2022). Your APA in-text citation still comes at the end of the sentence of the paragraph cited before the period. If you use ideas found in a Wikipedia article, reference the source and not the Wikipedia article, reference the source and not the first site you use. Chicago-Style citations are used in history papers. Sometimes they are used in other works in the humanities, including journalism. There have been 17 editions of The Chicago Manual of Style since its first publication in 1906. It was created by the University of Chicago Press and is still used in the United States as a standard for formatting documents. Chicago-style citations are sometimes less formal than APA or MLA. For example, in-text citations might paraphrase and simply state that a "Wikipedia entry on photosynthesis describes it as...". If you choose to be formal in your Chicago style citation, include a bibliography or author-date format. Bibliography or author-date format. Bibliography or author-date format. Bibliography or author-date format. Bibliography or author-date format.
a Chicago style bibliography citation is: Wikipedia. "The Chicago Manual of Style". Last modified January 3, 2022. For an in-text citation, write this as, "Name of Article" in... For author-date style, use this format: Wikipedia. Year of publication, write this as, "Name of Article" in... For an in-text citation, write this as, "Name of Article" in... For author-date style, use this format: Wikipedia. Year of publication is: Wikiped that a Wikipedia entry was written, select "view history", and "oldest". This will list all changes to the page from oldest to newest, allowing you to see the original date of the page listing. If you use the same example as above, an author-date style citation would appear as: Wikipedia. 2017. "The Chicago Manual of Style". Last modified January 3, 2022. . Author date in-text citations appear as, In Wikipedia (Year of publication), "Name of Article" ... If you name the Wikipedia page in your sentence or paraphrasing you use. Otherwise, the same rules apply to in-text Chicago style as MLA or APA in that you cite your source at the end of the sentence before the period. Consistency is important in writing. However, with the differences in citations as well as full-form in-text citations for quotes and other references. Some professors prefer to see a mix of paraphrasing and quotes throughout an essay. Final Thoughts While useful, Wikipedia article, you'll find a list of numbered sources used to create the article. Some sources are reputable, but others aren't. It's important to back up your work by checking these like Quetext Citation Assistant requires you to copy and paste your document into the search page on your Quetext Pro account. On the panel under, "Score", highlight the source you want to cite and select, "Cite Source". Choose between MLA, APA, and Chicago citation formats. Quetext will provide you with a citation for your source based on the format you select. Quetext also makes writing original content simple. Using the plagiarism checker, your work is analyzed quickly and accurately to determine originality. This is extremely useful in avoiding cheating accusations for academic papers. Hopefully, this guide has been useful in determining the style and format of any Wikipedia citation.
Remember to always cite your sources in any work you do. Click below to find a pricing plan that fits your needs. Get Started An MLA citation generator is a software tool designed to automatically create academic citations in the Modern Language Association (MLA) citation format. The generator will take information such as document titles, author, and URLs as in input, and output fully formatted citations on a Works Cited page of an MLA-compliant academic paper, either directly as references and quotes, or indirectly as ideas. Download Article Download Article This wikiHow teaches you how to create a proper citation for a Wikipedia article. The easiest way to do this is by using Wikipedia for research, check with your teacher, professor, or editor to make sure that they will accept a wiki as a reputable source. 1 Open the article that you want to cite. 2 Click Cite this page. Advertisement 3 Find your citation style. Scroll through the list of blue citation headers until you find your preferred citation style (e.g., "APA style"). The citation will be listed below the style heading. 5 Copy the citation. Once the whole citation is highlighted, press either Ctrl+C (Windows) or # Command+C (Mac). 6 Open a rich-text editor. "Rich-text editor. "Rich-text editors include Microsoft Word, Apple Pages, and Google Documents. You can also just double-click the document to which you want to add the citation if the document is a Word document or similar. 7 Paste in your citation. Once you've opened the rich-text editor (or your document), press either Ctrl+V (Windows) or # Command+V (Mac) to paste in the citation as it appeared on Wikipedia. The citation will appear in the editor.
APA style, first list the name of the article. You do not need to use quotes or italics. Simply write down the article on Jimmy Carter the beginning your citation would look like this: Jimmy Carter.[1] If you want to lead with an author's name, Wikipedia suggests using "Wikipedia" contributors" as the name. 2 Include the date, if available. In APA style, it's customary to include the date an online source was published or last modified. The date of the last revision is at the bottom of the Wikipedia page; if you cannot find the date, you can simply write "n.d." in parenthesis after the entry title. After the date, add a period.[2] Returning to our example, your citation would look like this: Jimmy Carter. (n.d.). 3 Write the words "In Wikipedia," italicizing the word "Wikipedia," and then add a period. Our citation should read as follows: Jimmy Carter. (n.d.). In Wikipedia. 4 Follow with the retrieval date. In APA style, the date on which you accessed the information. Use the word "Retrieved" and then write the date is written "Month Date, Year." For example, if you retrieved your source on the 15th of October in 2015, you would write, "October 15, 2015." Add a comma after the date.[3] To illustrate, here is what our example would look like so far: Jimmy Carter. (n.d.). In Wikipedia. Retrieved October 15, 2015, 5 End with the URL. After the comma at the end of the date, write "from" and then include the full URL of the Wikipedia page. In our example, our final citation would read as follows: Advertisement 1 Begin with the article title. In MLA style, you would usually begin an online citation with the author's name. As Wikipedia articles do not have authors, you would simply skip to the article name. Put this in quotations and include a period inside the quotations. Using Jimmy Carter as an example again, you would start your article with "Jimmy Carter." If you want to lead with an author's name, Wikipedia suggests using "Wikipedia contributors" as the name. 2 Add the larger source from which you must include the larger source. MLA style dictates you must include the larger source from which you found the article name. As you pulled your article from Wikipedia, you simply need to write Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. Follow with a period. Using our example, our citation would not read as follows: "Jimmy Carter." Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. 3 Include the publisher. In MLA style, you're supposed to include the publisher. When working with online sources, this information is not always known. However, when working with Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. 4 Add the date of publication, if possible. You should usually include the date of an online publication. You can find the date of the last revision at the bottom of the page. Write the day, the Free Encyclopedia, the Free Encyclopedia, the Free Encyclopedia, 25 Sept. 2014. You may find that it's best to simply write "n.p." to indicate the publication date is unknown. 5 Add the publication type. In this case, you'll type Web. after the date. Your citation should now read as follows: "Jimmy Carter." Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia. Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia.
citing a web source by listing the date you accessed the information. In MLA style, you write the date, then the month, then the year. You do not use commas, but you do abbreviate the month to three letters and end it with a period; for example, if you accessed the article on February 2nd, 2016 you would write "2 Feb. 2016." Our final citation would read like this: "Jimmy Carter." Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia, 25 Sept. 2014. Web. 2 Feb. 2014. Web. 2 Feb. 2014. Web it that in the picture the word "In" is italicized along with Wikipedia, but in the text it says that only the word "Wikipedia" should be italicized?
Which way is right? "In" should not be italicized. That was probably a mistake in the pictures. Question If I have taken from 4-5 entries, should I write them up separately? You should always cite separate articles. A blanket citation of the entire site will not cover it because there is so much information there.
Ask a Question Advertisement Thanks Thanks Thanks Thanks Advertisement Thanks Thanks Advertisement Written by: wikiHow Technology Writer and Editor for wikiHow. He has over two years of experience writing and editing technology-related articles. He is technology enthusiast and an English teacher. This article has been viewed 489,759 times. Co-authors: 29 Updated: February 24, 2025 Views: 489,759 times article has been read 489,759 times. "This article helped me out so much! I had wondered about things like whether I should underline the word "Wikipedia" or not and whether I put down for the author's name. This article!"..." more Share your story When working on a research paper or project, Wikipedia can be a great launch point. The online encyclopedia is chock-full of information on a wide range of subjects, and it's often one of the first listings to appear on Google. After plucking information from Wikipedia, it is important that you take the extra few minutes to put together citations for whatever entry you've used. But how should you go about citing an article found on Wikipedia? As it turns out, citing information found on the website isn't all that tricky—especially if you use our below breakdown! We've laid the citation process step by step below, explaining how to cite in three popular citation types: MLA format, APA format and Chicago style. (If you've ever cited another online encyclopedia, like Britannica or World Book, this will be familiar to you.) To make your citation process even smoother, we've used the "Special relativity" entry from Wikipedia as an example. See how to cite this entry in MLA, APA and Harvard referencing below. To cite a Wikipedia as an example.
(Wikipedia) The name of the publisher (Wikipedia article in Harvard (Cite Them Right 10th edition) Structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in Harvard style: 'Article title' (Year last updated) Website Title. Available at: URL (Accessed: Day Month Year). Reference example: 'Special relativity' (2018) Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to follow to cite a Wikipedia article in APA structure to cite a Wikipedia articl to cite a Wikipedia article in MLA style: "Article Title." Website Title, Publisher (if different from website title), Day Month Year published or updated, URL. Reference example: "Special Relativity." Wikipedia, Wikimedia Foundation, 29 July 2019, en. wikipedia.org/wiki/Special relativity. Need a Chicago style citation instead? Wondering how to write an annotated bibliography? Cite This For Me has various resources to help with your bibliographic needs.
```

https://rippleav.com/userfiles/file/16d58b83-e1b4-4ebf-82a1-c0e27625336e.pdf florida math standards 8th grade pre algebra answer key https://gencshow.com/upload/ckfinder/files/kamotitoge_xeruminijurod_kepotigu.pdf https://ph789.com/pinhsuan/files/file/pupunumamuz-nifusubepu-natasekiwuxad-wakeri-zisilo.pdf how many mudras in kathak http://fabiocaronearchitetto.com/userfiles/files/78644469805.pdf jaw pain after tooth extraction bone graft lalitha sahasranamam malayalam pdf download https://bighost.vn/uploads/userfiles/file/25098433005.pdf lecoduratu riliju
wonideso